Patent case: Rosuvastatina, Spain

Adrian Crespo (Clifford Chance) · Wednesday, July 11th, 2018

The influential Barcelona Court of Appeal corrected a finding of the Barcelona Patents Court, which – to great surprise – had lifted an injunction on finding that Swiss-type claims were affected by the Spanish Reservation to the European Patent Convention, and thereby ineffective in Spain. Although this decision arrived only after SPC expiry and thus much too late for this particular case, which concerned a top-selling blockbuster, it is nevertheless a welcome relief for Spanish patentees in similar situations.

Case date: 16 May 2018

Case number: Ruling no. 59/2018

Court: Court of Appeal of Barcelona
